Communications Coordinator meredith@templejeremiah.org

We have reached the time of year again where people set goals, make resolutions, and take on new challenges. While I encourage people to embrace this new sense of motivation often felt during January, I hope that drive lasts throughout the rest of the year, as well, and especially those related to Tikkun Olam.

Throughout this issue of the Covenant, examples of Tikkun Olam are discussed and celebrated, reinvigorating me to explore and be a part of some of the wonderful activities we have at Temple that positively impact others.

Rabbi Heaps mentions in her article that "Tikkun Olam can feel like a big, intimidating instruction, but when we break it into simple, small, steps repairing the world becomes something anyone can do." I find this mindset to be similar with setting New Year's resolutions, in that one big goal may be intimidating, but setting smaller, measurable goals is much more attainable. For example, like many others, I'd like to say one of my New Year's resolutions is to "workout more." However, that's a big goal the way it is currently written. Instead, I should make a plan of simpler, descriptive actions like "do 30 minutes of cardio a day" and "exercise with a trainer twice a week." These are much more approachable, measurable goals.

Instead of taking on the broad challenge of "helping others this year," I encourage you to ask questions, think critically, and make a plan on what it is you want to do to positively impact the world in 2023. You will read tons of ideas throughout this issue and our previous issues, like volunteering to help with our Feed the Hungry and Maot Chitim programs. These are simple, small, steps that you can take this year to reach a bigger goal of Tikkun Olam.

Mussar of Purim

with Rabbi Cohen

February 15th, 22nd and March 1st at 7:00 p.m.

The Purim story is one of the best known of all the stories contained within the Hebrew Bible. We celebrate Purim with carnivals, spiels, and merriment. Beneath all the silliness there are deeper messages that resonate today. Through the lens of Mussar we explore these lessons discerning the middot, spiritual attributes, highlighted within the story and the celebration.

Occasionally, when I'm looking for inspiration or a way to unwind, I like to watch the Great British Baking Show. I love the friendly competition of people simply trying to do their best with their self-taught baking skills. I like seeing them tackle new challenges, often with a sense of curiosity and enthusiasm. Even for their technical bakes, where the professional baker/judge asks them to make something that they've never seen before, there's a moment of stress quickly followed by each of the bakers diving right in despite not really knowing where to start. But the longer the season goes on, the recipe given in the technical challenge starts to change—instead of it being a full recipe with weights, temperatures, and times, it becomes a very slimmed down recipe. "Make a Pate a Choux," the instructions might say, expecting that the baker both knows what a Choux is and how to make it by heart.

Though it might be entertaining on TV, I find instructions like this frequent and frustrating in real life. What to some might be simple instructions, to others (especially those with less experience) becomes an insurmountable hurdle with no help offered. Telling a first-time car owner to change their car oil isn't as helpful as telling them step-by-step how to change their oil, or how to find a garage to help them.

Similarly, in Judaism, we often give instructions but forget when and how to break them down to make them manageable. "Observe Shabbat," we say – but forget to mention candles, family dinners, learning, and rest. "Honor your parents," we say – but leave the details open to interpretation. How intimidating!

Think about it. At Jeremiah, we're constantly talking about our responsibility to do Tikkun Olam, acts of repairing the world. What a huge responsibility! I imagine someone who knows nothing of our community, or nothing of Judaism, must find this an impossible task. Is every act we do supposed to fix the world? The whole world? In just one act? (Maybe a little hyperbolic, but you get the point.)

The truth is, for every big action we do in Judaism, there are a billion little steps taken to complete it. What a miracle it would be if we could solve food insecurity in one act. But much more realistic to address hunger one sandwich at a time with our Feed the Hungry program. How powerful we would be to ensure everyone had the mental health support they need. But a much more practical approach is to work with JCFS for referrals, expert advice, and support groups.

Tikkun Olam can feel like a big, intimidating instruction, but when we break it into simple, small, steps repairing the world becomes something anyone can do.

Tikkun Olam can feel like a big, intimidating instruction, but when we break it into simple, small, steps, repairing the world becomes something anyone can do.

Last month I was discussing rabbinic ethics and time travel with some of our high school students, and one brought up the philosophy of "the butterfly effect" – the idea that a time traveler could do something as small as injure a butterfly in the past, and entirely change the present. Eventually our discussion turned not to the relationship between past and present, but the one between present and future. If such a small action in the past can entirely change the present, then couldn't the same be said for a small action in the present completely changing the future?

None of us truly knows the impact we make with one sandwich, one smile, one phone call, one letter, one vote...We don't know the future we create with our small actions. But we know the goal, and if we have trust in ourselves – our knowledge, our support systems, our strength – then we might truly be able to repair our world.

Q PERSPECTIVE... from Matt Rissien · 🏻 WEEKLY TORAH Our Values, Our Contributions BY MATT RISSIEN Director of Congregational Learning matt@templejeremiah.org

What I love about Judaism is that so many of our teachings connect to values. Our values can be introduced as concepts within our classrooms and within our texts, but the real practice is how they stick with us into our everyday lives.

If you walk into Temple Jeremiah on any given Sunday, you will see acts of Tikkun Olam, repairing the world. When we teach our younger students about Tikkun Olam, we teach that it is not just about the literal acts of "Repairing the World," but also about having the mindset of doing good and being good. My favorite part about Sunday mornings is that Tikkun Olam is not only taught and experienced by our youth, but it is modeled by our teachers and adult congregants.

What I love about Judaism is that so many of our teachings connect to values. Our values can be introduced as concepts within our classrooms and within our texts, but the real practice is how they stick with us into our everyday lives. Time and time again I am amazed when hearing of so many contributions to our society that our congregants have made. We even had a "Tikkun Olam" panel last month of congregants sharing how they give back with our teens. What is great about the value of Tikkun Olam though, is that it does not matter how small or how large the act is, it is all about the intention in which we act.

I remember my first time setting foot in Temple Jeremiah. It was a Sunday morning in 2019 and Dr. Lidsky had invited a colleague and me to give a presentation about Israel to the high school students. We walked into the building and were amazed looking around at just how many parents, grandparents, and students were there, working together on what I now know was Feed the Hungry. We left amazed at the level of participation and dugma (role modeling) that we had just seen. I knew that this was a community that was doing things right.

As we reflect on 2022 and think about the future, take the time to ask what you can do to help repair the world. No matter how big or small, know that your actions can make a difference, and if you know you want to do something but do not know what or where, you can always come talk to the staff and clergy at Temple Jeremiah; we would love to help!

Social Justice Chair dana.garbarski@gmail.com

Over the past 18 months, the Social Justice Committee has begun to support A Safe Place, the leading organization in Lake County dedicated to addressing intimate partner violence and human trafficking. As we approached the Thanksgiving holiday, A Safe Place asked the organizations that provide support to help them provide 250 Thanksgiving baskets for their clients.

We were able to meet our goal of providing 50 Thanksgiving baskets thanks to the generous support of many Temple Jeremiah congregants; our J-Quest students, who collected tzedakah for this project; and Ariel Silver and Julie Becker, who helped to deliver the items to A Safe Place!

When we dropped off the items at A Safe Place, we unpacked with the Chief Development Officer of A Safe Place, Damaris Lorta. Damaris indicated that although they receive financial donations from several organizations, not as many people as she had We were able to meet our goal of providing 50 Thanksgiving baskets thanks to the generous support of many Temple Jeremiah congregants...

expected signed up to actually collect the items, and she was so grateful for our contribution. Our ability to use not just our financial resources but our time and physical resources to help this organization is so appreciated; when we do the shopping and collecting, it gives them more time to focus on their clients.

We are generous with our financial resources, and we are a community of doers. And that makes all the difference in so many ways for the many organizations we help to support through our Social Justice program. Please take a look at our many programs and ways to seek justice by repairing our world here: tinyurl.com/TJSocialJustice/

SOCIAL JUSTICE VOLUNTEER OPPORTUNITIES

Backpack Blessings

Backpack Blessings feeds between 40 and 60 children during the school year. Children in the Highland Park/Highwood School District are sent home with a bag of nourishing food to eat on weekends, when the children do not receive free breakfast and lunch at school. Please consider volunteering on January 6th and February 26th in one of the following ways:

Shift 1 volunteers: Setup and packing (9:00 - 10:15 a.m.) - bring food up from the temple basement, and set up the food on tables for packing. Pack food into bags, which are loaded into bins to be delivered to the schools. Volunteers also help clean up supplies.

Shift 2 volunteers: Loading and unloading (9:30 - 10:30 a.m.) - must be able to lift 25 pounds. Load the bins onto the truck at Temple Jeremiah, meet at Red Oak Elementary School, and unload bins at Red Oak and Sherwood Elementary Schools.

Truck rental volunteer: (9:00 - 11:00 a.m.) Rent a truck from U-Haul and arrive at Temple Jeremiah at 9:30 a.m. to pick up the bins. The driver drives the delivery to Red Oak Elementary School and returns the truck once unloaded at the school. The rental will be reimbursed.

Another opportunity is to pick up the bins from Red Oak Elementary School on the Friday (prior to packing) before 3:00 p.m. and bring them to Temple Jeremiah.

Volunteers of all ages and abilities are welcome! To sign up, visit: tinyurl.com/BPB2022-23. Please contact Dana Garbarski at dana.garbarski@gmail.com with any questions.

Feed the Hungry

Join us the first Sunday of every month to make lunches to feed the hungry in Chicago. This family-friendly activity requires grocery shopping (approximately $60) in preparation for lunch assembly and delivery. Join us on February 5th. The two ways to participate are:

Make lunches at home (two sandwiches with two slices of any lunch meat, one bag of chips, one piece of fruit, and two cookies). Drop off your lunches by 9:30 a.m. at Temple Jeremiah outside the west doors (the circle drive). Each drop-off slot is for 20 lunches (e.g. if you are packing 80 lunches/month, please sign up for four drop-off slots).

Four families gather in the temple kitchen at 9:00 a.m. while assembling about 80 lunches assembly-line style. We then load all the lunches at 9:30 a.m. and drive downtown to our partner church and supervise the children handing out the lunches to those in-need.

To sign up, visit: tinyurl.com/FTH2022-23. Your participation is greatly appreciated. If you have any questions, please contact Mindy Kurtz at cupermom@aol.com

Welcome the Stranger

HIAS (the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society) has a new volunteer program assisting individuals arriving from Afghanistan to put down roots in the Chicago area. They have reached out to Temple Jeremiah looking for one or two volunteers to help them get settled. If you are interested, please contact Barb Miller at bmiller54@comcast.net.

By LIZ TRAGER MENDEL

Temple Jeremiah Member and Inlcusion Committee Member

In the previous issue of the Covenant, Director of Philanthropy Leslie Landman discussed an email that Liz Trager-Mendel and Scott Mendel sent to her, which put in motion a plan to make Temple Jeremiah more accessible.

Though the Temple Jeremiah Inclusion Committee had been brainstorming possibilities for making the temple fully accessible for several years, one of the main barriers remained the stage area in the Slotnick Social Hall. With guidance from Executive Director Danny Glassman, the committee considered several options, but all proved too costly or impractical within the confines of the physical space.

It so happened that the Mendel family was looking for an opportunity to do something for the temple to honor Cantor Emerita, Amy Zussman, who has been involved with Inclusion activities for many years at Temple Jeremiah and beyond, including Keshet and the Selah Choir.

Sarah Mendel, an adult with physical and intellectual disabilities, has known Cantor Amy since she first came to Temple at age nine. Sarah bonded with Amy from the start, and in adulthood, Sarah proudly sang with the Selah Choir.

While Sarah was sheltered-in-place at Misericordia (a group living facility) during the pandemic, she was unable to go to her Temple job or even come home to visit her family for five months! It was a gut-wrenching challenge for the whole family. However, Cantor Amy had an idea: Amy's smile, patience, adaptability, and angelic voice soothed Sarah every Friday with a Shabbat Sing-along over Zoom. Amy has been singing on Zoom with Sarah now since the pandemic began—offering her time, energy, compassion, and love, and yes, lifting her spirit.

A wheelchair lift for Temple Jeremiah in honor of Cantor Amy's contributions to inclusion seemed like the perfect way to reciprocate for all she has done for the Mendel family, as well as all the children and adults in need of support through the years. This past summer, Danny Glassman and Leslie Landman discovered a mobile handicapped lift made by Adaptive Engineering that would be perfect for our stage area. This lift is large enough to accommodate an adult wheelchair, yet can be easily handoperated and moved from place to place—anywhere in the temple—including outdoors.

Amy's music, friendship, compassion, and vibrant spirit spread blessings throughout our temple community. Now this inclusion spirit can spread into the Slotnick Social Hall and up onto the stage. We are fully accessible. Thank you, Cantor Amy and the Inclusion Committee, for all you have done.

Aesthetics, Symbolism, and Connection

By LESLIE LANDMAN

Director of Philanthropy
leslie@templejeremiah.org

Have you ever been to an art fair or gallery and been drawn to a piece of Judaica? Perhaps a hand-sculptured menorah, silver Shabbat candlesticks, or a jeweled tzedakah box? Maybe some cherished pieces are meaningfully displayed in your home or brought out for use on Shabbat or a holiday.

Ritual art is an example of a concept referred to as "hiddur mitzvah," which has its base in biblical commentary and Talmudic thought, and recognizes that adding an aesthetic dimension can enhance and even transform a ritual experience.

This idea inspired the creation of the donor wall honoring our Building Tomorrow Together campaign, which was dedicated at a festive Oneg Shabbat this past November. Its creation was also motivated by a desire to add depth of meaning by connecting the artwork to core values and the history of the temple.

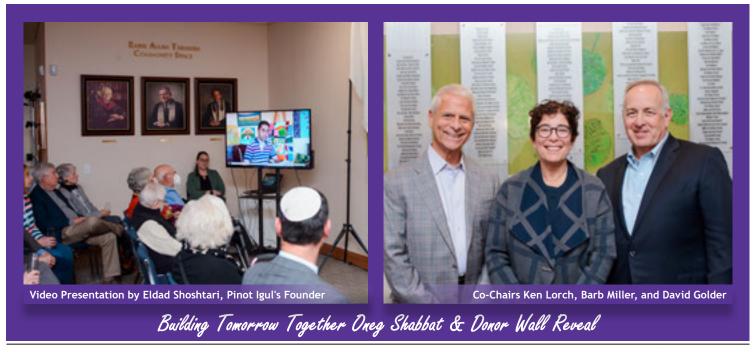

The central art of the donor wall incorporates flowing green leaves, which connect to the campaign's theme of nurturing and growing for the future, and also recalls the images of Rabbi Cohen and children from the congregation planting a tree together in the campaign's announcement video. This piece also alludes to the history of this congregation, by incorporating metal similar to the donor walls of our past campaigns, as we built the strength of this campaign on the shoulders of those who supported the temple previously. The seven-stemmed menorah design with connections to enlightenment, wisdom, and creation reflects other beautiful menorah art that we see in our lobby and sanctuary.

The green leaves were designed by an artist named Roi Maharata, an Ethiopian immigrant to Israel who arrived as part of Operation Moses. We learned about Roi, his journey, and challenges through Eldad Shoshtari, the founder of Pinot Igul Gallery. Based in Israel, the gallery exclusively represents artists with disabilities. Eldad shared a video greeting with us at our celebratory gathering, immediately captivating everyone in attendance with desire to improve the lives of those with disabilities, a commitment, he noted, he shares with Temple Jeremiah. Eldad's video, along with photos from the gathering, are posted on our campaign webpage at templejeremiah.org/building-tomorrow-together.

I hope that the layers of symbolism in this piece resonate with you, as it honors our community.

If you would like to explore giving opportunities at the temple or have any questions about the donor wall or Pinot Igul, please feel free to contact me at leslie@templejeremiah.org.

Our Memorial Wall and Wall of Life Giving

If you wish to create a permanent remembrance of your loved ones, please consider adding their names to Temple Jeremiah's Memorial Wall. This beautiful wall commemorates those who touched our lives but are no longer with us.

A leaf on our Wall of Life is a meaningful way to share your happy occasion with the Temple community in a lasting way. It permanently marks a celebration such as a birth, Bar/Bat Mitzvah, Confirmation, special birthday, wedding or anniversary.

For questions about Memorial Wall plaques or Wall of Life leaves, please contact Danny Glassman at danny@templejeremiah.org.
